German Opposition to the War

TUMULTUOUS PROCEEDINGS IN THE NORTH GERMAN PARLIAMENT—SPEECHES AGAINST THE NEW WAR LOAN BY REPRESENTATIVES BEBEL AND LIEBKNECHT

Berlin (Dec 8) Correspondence of the New York World

The spread of discontent in the ranks of labor about the continuation of the war manifests itself in more ways than one but particularly in the proceedings of the North German Parliament There are two sections of labor reformers in Germany The one is represented in the North German Parliament by Bebel and Liebknecht and the other by Dr Schweitzer and others Bebel and Liebknecht represent districts of Saxony all the others represent Prussian constituencies Dr Schweitzer has for a long time been suspected and accused of being secretly in league with Bismarck against the Fortschritts Partei On the eve of the war with Austria in 1866, Dr Schweitzer made a lecturing tour through Germany to convince the working men of the civilizing and unifying mission of Bismarck and his King in Germany When, in July last, Bebel and Liebknecht abstained from voting on the 120,000,000 thaler war loan, and gave their reasons for it, Dr Schweitzer denounced them in his paper as traitors to Germany Shortly after he sent his man Friday (Hasemlouer) to Leipsig to lecture against Liebknecht s treason, but, wonderful to relate Dr Schweitzer has been obliged to follow Liebknecht's lead

True to their mission Bebel and Liebknecht proposed an amendment to the proposition of the present war loan to this effect

"WHEREAS, The war declared on the 19th of July by Louis Bonaparte, then Emperor of the French, ceased in point of fact by the surrender of Louis Bonaparte and the fall of the Empire,

WHEREAS, According to the King of Prussia s own declarations in his speech from the throne on the 19th of July and in his proclamation to the French people of August 11th, the war on the part of Germany was only a war of self defense, and not a war against the French nation

WHEREAS, The war which, despite these declarations, has been carried on since September 4th, is not a war against the Emperor and his army, who have disappeared, but a war against the French nation not a defensive war, but an aggressive war of conquest not a war for the independence of Germany, but for the subjugation of the noble French nation, destined, according to the royal speech of July 19th, to share with the German nation the blessings of Christian civilization and to enter into the more wholesome emulation in the arts of peace than the bloody strife of arms,

This House Resolves, To refuse the loan demanded to continue the war and requests the Federal Chancellor to waive the question of the annexation of French territory and speedily to conclude peace with the French Republic '

In the debate which followed Bebel, an operative Turner, said

"Although I shall express sentiments contrary to those of the previous speaker I claim to be as good a German patriot as he and the great majority in this assembly Four months ago I characterized in this place the then impending war as a dynastic war, brought about by the intrigues of Bismarck I stated that a war between France and Germany would be impossible if these nations were the rulers of their own destinies which was not the case on either side In his speech from the throne, July 17, the King of Prussia emphatically stated that the ruler of France had misguided and irritated the French people, and he subsequently declared to the French people that he only made war against Napoleon and his armies [Uproar and loud cries of No! No!] The Empire was overthrown, in five short weeks its armies were shattered, and the Emperor himself made prisoner The war went on, and the last speech from the throne blames the present government for its continuation There is no legal authority in France with whom to conclude peace, is the plea It has been asserted that the present government has not been formally recognized by the people If that means that the government of national defence does not represent the opinion of the French people, all I can say, gentlemen is that you are laboring under a delusion [Laughter] Never would the French people have done what has been accomplished since September 4 except of their own free will and to back the government [Uproar and contradiction] Gentlemen we are two against two hundred and eighty listen to what we have to say! I repeat, what the French have accomplished since September 4 could not have been accomplished at the dictation of any disliked government—it would have been utterly impossible under a monarchical government The plea in the royal speech that there is no recognized authority in France with whom to conclude is a falsehood The Chancellor of the Federation would have been too ready to treat if the French government could or would have accepted his terms—the cession of Alsace and Lorraine The royal message leaves no manner of doubt on that head Any government that would yield on this point would be speedily proclaimed the legally recognized authority of France Liberty and unity the King of Prussia promised as the certain results of the war Well, the German troops have been victorious, and liberty is suppressed in the most brutal manner and why? Because the annexation question is getting disagreeable Even Saxony has had to succumb to Prussian pressure and suspend in the most illegal manner the right of public meeting for the purpose of silencing any opposition to the continuance of the war A peculiar sign of the strength developed in this war is the arbitrary arrest of all who venture to express an opinion against annexation, and since it is forbidden elsewhere to discuss the question I will here state the reasons against it

President—The question before the House is the loan

'Bebel According to the royal speech the loan is wanted to carry the annexation policy into effect We cannot speak of one without considering the other The annexation will be useless as a strategic guarantee against invasion The possession of Alsace, Strasbourg and Metz did not enable the French to stop the German invaders from marching on Paris and beyond as little will the possession of these places enable the Germans to prevent a French army entering Germany at some future time The royal speech states that the feeling of retaliation and revenge in France will never die out With such a prospect before us wisdom dictates that we should be lenient in the hour of success and that we should not wantonly irritate the feelings of a people to whom the appellation noble ' is given in the royal speech We ought to leave to France what has belonged to her for centuries the more so as the population of Alsace and Lorraine has not the remotest inclination to be incorporated in this new German union under the domination of the House of Hohenzollern The voice of the people ought to be the sole guide in the alteration of frontiers If the right of conquest is to decide then we shall have to submit when others get strong enough to impose their conditions upon us [Roars of laughter] If once admitted there will be no end of wars The sole occupation and aim of nations would be eternal war, we would return to barbarism Official patriotism is a cheap commodity The last royal speech tells the French people that it is the fault of their obstinate Government that their country is subjected to the horrors of war The King might have bestowed a thought on the Germans who are ruined by the war as well as the French, who long as much for peace as the French and are tired of this mass murder The people who have no voice in the matter have to sacrifice everything When I consider that there are 4 000 newspapers constantly preaching sacrifices, and the patriotism that is vaunted besides the press in the town councils and other bourgeois gatherings and compare them with the official return of the subscriptions to the first loan I must say with Goethe 'much cry and little wool' Of 20,000 000 thalers only 68,000 have been subscribed The French bourgeoisie subscribed in a few days 750 000 000 francs How should we fare if instead of success we had met with reverses? Those who are loudest in their protestation of patriotism with us lie in wait for a higher percentage [A general uproar, and repeated cries of ' turn the fellow out ']

'President You are libeling your own people [Great confusion and ringing of the bell]

'Bebel I hope the state of war is not yet established here I have been misunderstood I allude to the capitalists whose subscriptions to the loan are contrary to their professions of patriotism, but I shall trouble you no more I shall conclude by declaring that the loan must be refused, and the Federal Chancellor requested to conclude peace with the French nation without annexation

'Liebknecht, another labor representative, said in the debate The war now carried on is not against France but against the Republic The defensive war on our side was ended in five weeks France offered us peace ! A free France would be the best guarantee of peace for us We should not have such a beggarly German Union then as we have now, which is only a corrupted edition of the old bunds

"President You exceed the limits of debate You must express your thoughts in a form that is bearable to a refined assembly, [Applause]

'Liebknecht During the time of the lowest degradation of the empire there was more liberty of speech than here The opposition was frequently interrupted, but not treated like a set of school children, in a manner which reduces the dignity of this assembly to the level of a class

'President I call you to order

Liebknecht Public opinion will be on my side at home and abroad [Loud cries of In France '] Aye even in France The watch on the Rhine [illegible] to the rear of Paris [illegible] Napoleon is called [illegible] by the King of Prussia and is feasted while the German [illegible] their blood to [illegible] —[tumultuous [illegible]]—who [illegible] It is more honorable to be the [illegible] of a French workman than the rogue at Wilhelmshohe [Roars of laughter] The man who, as it were, by command was denounced as a monster by 5,000 newspapers [illegible] ed Are you going to massacre the French nation? Oh, no you only refuse to recognize the republic But the French will have nothing but the republic and a French republic without a standing army would be the death blow to despotism here To prevent that the war was continued, to continue the war war of extermination—the new loan is required The annexation of Alsace and Lorraine will be the constant source of quarrel Instead of insuring peace it will bring and military dictatorship,'

An out-and-out great radical Lasker wished to know if it were not possible to [illegible] disagreeable and refractory members out of the House, and a full bred aristocrat Herr von Blakenburg, an intimate friend of Bismarck said that the mover and seconder of the treacherous amendment might bless their stars if they were allowed to leave the House without getting bones broken Bebel and Liebknecht were continually interrupted while speaking, and the President, Dr Simson, bade Liebknecht clothe his thoughts in language becoming such a highly cultivated assembly as that which he addressed but he tolerated the cries of ' turn em out, and approvingly smiled at Blakenburg s remarks The other labor representatives took no part in the debate, but when the amendment was put to the vote Dr Schweitzer and his man Friday, Hasenclever, voted for it

In committee, when the government proposition was discussed, paragraph by paragraph, some made an onslaught on the French that they had always conspired to divide Germany, This was too much Liebknecht He stoutly denied that French people in general or the republicans in particular, had ever troubled themselves about German divisions but advised the gentlemen present to consult history there they would find that it was the intrigues of German Princes, and notably the house of Hohenzollern A general uproar prevented him finishing the sentence, and Dr Simson with his stentorian voice, declared that he should not call the Hohenzollerns traitors in that house Everyone except Liebknecht s immediate neighbors would have it that he had said the treachery of the German princes Liebknecht denied having made use of the word treachery but would not shrink from applying it to the Hohenzollerns if he thought proper He endeavored to show how Strasbourg and other places had been played into the hands of the French kings, when, with the consent of the great majority of the House he was ordered to sit down for which he ironically thanked the President of that highly cultivated assembly When the final vote was taken, Babel, Edwald, Fritzsche Hasenclaver, Liebknecht, Mende, Schrapsand Schweitzer voted against the loan.

The importance of the vote does not consist in the number, but in the fact that all the members who owe their seats to workingmen electors voted against the loan

CURRENT NOTES

General Schenck is closing up his Committee matters, and expects to sail for England January 15th He will not resign his seat until just before he goes, and Governor Hays is not expected to call a special election to fill the vacancy

The Post Office Department is having made at Colt's factory a supply of what is considered the best mail bag lock ever invented When fastened, a numbered plate of glass covers the key hole, and the glass has to be broken before the bag can be unlocked or the lock tampered with

In a Philadelphia paper appeared an advertisement, "Wanted, ten good pointers ' By breakfast time, the advertiser was run down by dog merchants, with all sorts of specimens of pointers " As he desired ten of that class of bricklayers known as ' pointers " his surprise may be imagined

In the examination of applicants for places in the Interior Department under Secretary Cox, so many of them were impaled on the horns of the following sum' that it became known as 'Cox s catcher " A sold a cow for $25, and by the transaction lost 16⅔ per cent. He sold another cow at an advance of 16 per cent, for just enough to cover by the profit the loss upon the first cow. What did the second cow sell for ?

The well known German chemist and geologist, Dr Charles Gustavus Bischof died at Bonn on the 30th of November He was born near Nuremburg in Bavaria, on the 18th of January, 1792, and received his education at the University of Erlangen where he applied himself at first to the study of mathematics and astronomy, though he subsequently abandoned this branch of science, and turning his attention to chemistry, became one of the most distinguished pupils of Prof Hilderbrandt. In 1819 he was appointed Professor of Chemistry and Technology, in the University of Bonn An enthusiastic geologist, Dr Bischof sought to discover in molecular action certain geological phenomenon

The head and front of wom[illegible] against the laws of good [illegible] health, as well as of elevated [illegible] her determination of late years [illegible] odious things I repeat that [illegible] an offense against elevated mora[illegible] though they deceive nobody, they [illegible] ed to deceive, and deceit in any form [illegible] offense against good morals The woman who stands before her toilet glass at bedtime and surreptitiously denudes her head of a frowsy, dirty and dingy mass of dead hair, instinctively feels the meanness of her situation Not for the untold treasures of Golconda would she have a masculine eye gaze upon her at that unlucky moment! And the glance of some envious rival of her own sex is almost equally dreaded. The poor little knot of hair twisted so tightly and ungracefully at the back of her head, looks doubly scanty by contrast with the enormous mass lying upon the dressing table, and at the very hour when her thoughts should be most pure and elevated, she slinks to bed feeling that she has all day acted an unrepented lie, which she means to get up and repeat on the morrow ! And to live in an atmosphere of petty deception is harmful to the truthfulness of the soul

Yet as a general thing that little bunch of despised natural hair at the back of a woman s head is capable of being turned into a personal adornment, which she can wear without any feeling of reproach or of self reproach I once remember calling upon a lady friend who not being very well, came down with her bright black hair twisted into a hasty but classical knot at the back of her head Her hair was by no means over-abundant, but this knot was so exactly in accordance with the shape and size of her head, that the eye—pleased with this harmony of proportion—saw in her a grace and beauty which had been hidden before, when the fine and womanly outlines of head had been hidden under that odious half bushel of braids and puffs, called a chignon

The very finest heads in ancient sculpture are not overburdened with hair and it will be noticed that, as a rule, it is arranged so as to interfere as little as possible with the outlines of the head But there is an airy grace in these well proportioned living waving (not crimped) and filleted locks which puts to shame the ponderosity and the coarseness of the mighty nest of artificial and lifeless braids and curls which the modern woman is fond of hooking on to the back of her head—much as if it were an inverted washbowl

Now the beauty of all hair is its life That gloss and gleam—that richness of color—that peculiar something, which shows that it is alive and a part of the head upon which it is arranged, that the warm blood, coursing living veins sends through its numerous tubes the sap which gives it freshness and brightness. Between the hair growing on a healthy head and the dead hair which has been detached from the flesh which bred it, there is a great difference—a difference which can both be seen and felt

How fuzzy and faded the lady s back braids are ! But look at the smooth shiny deeper colored hair of which just a little may be seen about her forehead or temples though she hides it so carefully away to make room for strange hair upon her head while the front hair is alive and all the pomatum in the world cannot give the former the natural living gloss of the latter

Yesterday I saw a lady in a store who was deliberately [illegible] a long coil of [illegible] imitation of natural hair [illegible] When I thought of all the horrible stories of [illegible] I had heard [illegible] I crown [illegible]

Portland and the Railroads

The discussion in our columns by correspondents relative to the natural advantages of Portland as a commercial point and the changes that may be brought about by the development of a general railroad system for the country we doubt not is attracting attention especially the attention of our city readers Both writers have presented useful suggestions but we do not fully agree with either We can hardly agree that Portland is so devoid of natural advantages as one writer seems to think, nor can we accept the idea of the other that Portland's real danger lies near at home, that is to say, in the probability that East Portland may become the leading point, and that there is little danger of the building of an important place on the river below us

Portland's natural advantages we agree are not remarkably great, but that they are very considerable when compared with the like advantages and facilities possessed at other points on the rivers above and below us is proven by the fact that abortive attempts have been made at very many places to build towns that would command the trade of the country, and that Portland long ago outstripped them all Points above here could not be reached by vessels from the ocean, points below could not be reached by wagons from the Wallamet valley The canyon west of Portland offered a chance for the construction of a wagon road through the high range of hills that lie for a great distance along the Columbia and Wallamet rivers and shut out the approach to the valley, and the opening of this and other roads gave Portland a great advantage We think it safe to say that no point below here is naturally so accessible by wagons from all parts of the Wallamet valley as Portland is, and no point above is accessible by vessels from the sea Portland has in this possessed an important natural advantage when her position is compared with that of other points above and below which have aspired to become important towns

But under the new conditions that are now to arrive with the railroad era, an advantage of this kind is too small to possess any real significance. It will not do for Portland to rely upon it Such an advantage may readily be overcome by capital working in other directions, and building lines of railway to converge and center elsewhere Whatever Portland's natural advantages may have been under the primitive system of traffic and commerce, they will amount to little or nothing under the railway system She must contend hereafter for her ascendency and not leave it to nature and chance The advantage given her by nature, together with the enterprise exhibited by her early citizens, have enabled her to achieve her present position. To maintain that position Portland must now rely on her own exertions She can accomplish it, but it will require energy, vigilance and judgment.

The important question is not now concerning the natural advantages of this place, for they, we conceive, are not so great but they may be overcome. The real question is one of combining and concentrating at this point artificial advantages which shall outweigh those that may be created elsewhere. [illegible] the problem now A powerful aid in this matter will be the West Side Road, and Portland should not neglect anything that will tend to secure this additional makeweight in her gain

The Fate of Paris.

[illegible] are that the fall of Paris cannot be longer averted The besieging armies are pushing active operations against its [illegible] and appear to have carried or [illegible] some of the strongest of the forts [illegible] it may be expected that unless a speedy capitulation takes place, the bombardment of the city will now begin in earnest Of course this will be an awful transaction in all its aspects But what other nation, under similar circumstances, would not do as the Germans are doing? Were we in the place of the men investing Paris can it be supposed that we could or would do otherwise?

Paris was made a fortress, has been stubbornly defended, and will be compelled to submit to the usual hazards of war. If an attempt is made to continue the defense of the city after the forts are carried there will be bloody street fighting, conflagrations and horrible sacrifice of life and the end of it will probably be that the city will be sacked as other cities have been on like occasions

This spasm of honesty is really edifying Here is the entire Democratic press of Oregon awarding great praise to Congressman Smith for introducing his bill to prevent further spoliations of the School lands of Oregon. The Albany Democrat says that the donation of land by the General Government to this State "has been an elephant of such huge proportions as to attract the attention of speculators and land grabbers," and so it is "pleasant to observe" that Mr Smith is taking measures to put a stop to such schemes The Democrat, however, favored the act to despoil the lands set apart for the school fund, which passed the Legislature last fall, and it wants the hungry ring who did this thing to retain the lands, though it calls them "speculators and "land grabbers" Now if the Democratic party is going to repent of its conduct in supporting these plundering schemes, the first thing to be done is to return the stolen goods That is the only evidence of repentance that is at all admissible Let them ask themselves, in the language of the usurping fratricide in Hamlet,—"Can one be pardoned and retain the offence?

Nearly all the newspapers in the towns around us are again having their fling at Portland The Dalles Mountaineer for one has somewhat to say of the "impudent pretensions of Portland-on Wallamet" We hope our friends in the outlying towns will continue to "lay on" in this style It seems to do them good, and certainly does Portland no injury. The "pretensions" of Portland may be "impudent" and all that, but then she is preparing to maintain them, and to continue to be the leading city on the waters of the Columbia river

A little while ago Gen Bourbaki, the French commander was reported insane. The dispatches now say he is marching on Nancy and other points in eastern France with a view of cutting off the communication of the German armies with their country If this is true there is more method in Bourbaki's madness than in the sanity of some of the other French commanders While the German armies are now all engaged in the heart of France the most obvious thing for the French to try to do is to cut their communications

The Effect of It

The Free Trade League has published a specimen tariff such an one as they would enact if they had power The duties are levied wholly on articles which we cannot produce, and touch no single article which we can produce This is offering a premium to other nations to manufacture the only description of goods which we can manufacture here, Such a system would discriminate against our own people It would be a tariff in favor of everybody but ourselves "Concede to the leaders of the so-called revenue reform agitation says the Boston Advertiser "the success they aspire to, and there would be found a rather numerous class, silent as yet in this controversy, who would not let them off so easily New England might stand the shock as well as any other section of the country, although she has vastly more at stake than any other The manufacturing towns and cities would have a hard time of it But what would become of the cotton and woolen factories already springing up in the South and West, which have their fortunes yet to make, and of the rolling mills and vast furnaces just beginning to give the new empire west of the Alleghanies a realizing sense of its power? Their doors would be closed within a month The tide of emigration now setting so strongly in that direction would be stopped The capital now flowing so freely thither under the encouragement of favorable laws, and the expectation that they will be permanent, would be withdrawn And in the panic and revolution of industries which would follow, those who had been instrumental in bringing about this disastrous backsliding would have ample opportunity to reflect upon their folly "

The free traders and "revenue reformers" refuse to allow the income tax to be abolished Not long ago a resolution was passed through the House declaring that the whole system of internal taxation, except as to spirituous liquors and tobacco, should be repealed This was an adroit movement and was intended to drive the free traders to the wall Many of them innocently voted for it. Of course if internal taxes are removed it will be necessary to avoid any considerable reduction of duties on imports The free traders, however, soon saw where this would lead them, and they at once set themselves against the policy which they had just voted for The income tax, therefore, has small chance of being repealed, and other internal taxes will be continued. Do the people prefer this system of taxation? It is the free traders policy Reduce the indirect taxes, cut off the customs revenues and accept the doctrine of free traders, and deficiencies in revenue will have to be supplied by increased internal, or direct, taxation

The Democratic press has nothing more to say about the dangers of Chinese immigration. That nightmare has passed away With it has departed another of the supposed "eternal principles." The Herald was once accustomed to come down on the Chinaman, and in those times printed thrilling articles declaring that it was in favor of white people having "good beef and bread to eat" But nothing of that sort appears in its columns now White people have lost their advocate for "beef and bread."

Will the war go on after Paris falls? Very probably it will, for it would be a bold prediction to declare that a people who have shown so much fortitude and gallantry as the French have displayed since their imbecile Emperor left them defenseless in the presence of six hundred thousand German soldiers, will submit without a further effort Even if Paris capitulates France would seem to be in a better condition to defend herself than she was after the overthrow at Sedan Peace is not yet

The Olympia Standard, the Democratic organ of Washington Territory, estimates the Democratic organ published in this city at about its actual value The Standard says that "as a party organ, or the special organ of any cause, the Herald is worse than useless, for its tergiversations and follies have lost to it the respect of all parties" That is pretty severe, but it does not become us to question such high Democratic authority as Mr Beriah Brown, in a matter of this kind

MISCELLANEOUS

General Phil Sheridan has written to a friend in New York city, saying he will return home early in February.

Nearly all the officers captured at Sedan, intending to desert, have chosen captivity rather than parole, with the purpose to desert.

A French paper observes that the sympathies of the United States go at all events thus far, that a loan placed in the New York market would be covered

The will of Richard Nelson Hayden, of Chicago, one of the victims of the ill fated steamship Cambria, has been probated The will provides that for twelve years the rents of certain property shall be divided between the Orphan Asylum, the poor of the parish of Christ Church, the Home of the Friendless and the Magdalen Asylum, the respective portions to be paid on each Christmas morning

The electricity generated by a rapidly moving belt is immense The one leading from the fly wheel of the large engine that drives the works in Batterson's building, Hartford, develops electricity enough to ignite a gaslight situated at least six feet from the belt By presenting the knuckles of one hand to the belt and the point of the finger of the other to the burner, the gas will be instantly ignited

As one Winn, of Hudson, N Y, was riding past a sand bank in that town, his attention was called by a boy to a bloody bag in the bottom of a pit, which, on examination, was found to contain the bodies of five decapitated turkeys still able to kick Winn took them and the boy into his wagon, and on reaching home was met by his wife with the information that five of their best turkeys had been stolen the night before Winn concluded that he needn't look any further for the owner of those in the bag

GENERALITIES

It costs New York city almost a million of dollars a year to light her streets, and then she has "ways that are dark."

The Hook and Needle Company of New Haven, Conn, has received an order for two and a half million fish hooks, the largest order of the kind ever made

The pigeon mail from Paris suggests to a cotemporary the fulfillment of the scripture prophecy "For a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter"

A most favorable symptom of public feeling in the South is the decreased sale of "Brick" Pomeroy's "red hot" Democracy Where two years ago ten copies of his paper were sold, one can scarcely be put off now

A Western correspondent of the Boston Journal declares the statement that the buffaloes are deserting the plains is a fiction The railroad track bothers them They consider it a snare, and will not cross it They run along beside the track for miles and when they come to a culvert, dive under

The $100,000 Subsidy.

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

In the OREGONIAN of this morning I find a column communication, dated January 8 1871 from "Citizen," giving expression to his "painful impressions," of the "great and unfortunate lack of judgment and a proper comprehension of this subject, and what was befitting and necessary to the occasion displayed by most of the speakers" at the railroad meeting Saturday evening "Citizen" should be pitied for being made the victim of such pangs on Sunday But such travail as "Citizen" endured ought to have produced more "stirring words and convincing arguments" than his column of "would be's" amounts to.

His article contains these points First—A lamentation and exclamation at the "utterly ill timed and inappropriate" statements and "cooling effect of the remarks of the speakers" Second—Some "stirring words and convincing arguments" from "Citizen's" own brains and pen Third—The hope that if there be another meeting of this sort some "speaker equal to the occasion will appear"

Now it seems to be in very bad taste for "Citizen" to invite men to speak, as the Committee and the audience did those who spoke Saturday evening, and then turn upon them and say they were unequal to the occasion, had no brains, and couldn't find suitable words, etc. But, for myself I should have had no care for that and taken no notice of it had not "Citizen" taken issue with my position concerning Portland's want of natural advantages I did not say precisely and unqualifiedly that Portland had no natural advantages I said this "Comparing Portland with numerous other points that might be selected there are here no natural advantages for a commercial emporium," and the people all over the country outside of Portland know it and say it every day The only point, however, which "Citizen" claims as a great natural advantage" for Portland is that "it was the port, in fact about the only port where ships from the ocean and wagons from the interior could meet and exchange their burdens"

There is an error of fact. Rainier, St Helens, Linton and many other points, with an equal expenditure (or rather waste) of money on roads, could have been made as accessible by land or water as Portland has ever been "Citizen," however forgets to state that here in Portland the "wagons from the interior" and the "ships from the ocean" every year, for a longer or shorter time, fail to connect. For three months in the year the "wagons from the interior" are sunken in bottomless mud, and for periods varying from a week to two months the "ships from the ocean" are blockaded by ice or stuck fast on sand bars, and the "wagons from the interior" in exchanging burdens with the "ships from the ocean" find a little addition to the ordinary freight bills of 25 cents to $1 50 per ton for "lighterage."

These are facts that nearly every one, except such discerning ones as "Citizen," knows and is willing to admit

Such being the truth, it is not wise to overlook it in calculating the future of business We had best look all our difficulties squarely in the face, make ourselves understand them, and go about a remedy

I affirm that Portland was made a point of trade and became the commercial metropolis by the power of a little capital and the wisdom and energy of a few of her business men, and not by any natural advantages of location The old settlers and proprietors of the town site offered greater inducements to business men in the matter of property and real estate than did other places, they advertised the point and had it "written up," at home and abroad, they bought a steamship and ran it from San Francisco to our own docks direct, and so compelled the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. to pass by their own dock at St Helens and put goods down here, they opened roads for the country people, they went through the valley and stirred up and kept alive an interest in the place, and in divers similar modes worked practically and materially for the town. That early enterprise regarding outside operations productive of growth and permanence ceased some time ago, and we have been busy with Nicholson pavements and brick and iron fronts, and in getting all we could and keeping all we got.

We have a beautiful and wealthy town, but a new era has dawned The "wagons from the interior" are losing their occupation, the railroad as a means of intercourse and communication is engrossing the attention, the capital and exertions of the time The original difficulties of Portland's location arise afresh, there is a demand, an imperative demand for the same sort of vigilance, energy and sacrifice which gave the town its first start What nature has denied may be supplied by capital and skill We need, we must have a railroad to connect us direct with the west side counties We need a McAdam or plank road to Dayton, and another to the Northwest Tualatin Plains

We have allowed matters to assume such a shape that we are in some sense at Holladay's mercy, he offers to save us from the consequences of our stupidity for $100,000 Salvation cheap! I say let us be saved.

Citizen's second point, in my opinion, is but a guess—an opinion of his that this or that "would be" His occasion for alarm arises from the establishment of terminal depots at East Portland. Perhaps his guesses might become facts, and if Citizen can indite out that material "string of words and convincing arguments," he should go on with his work, but he had better remember that Portland will gain nothing by attempting to conceal from the world or from itself the real difficulties of its position.

As to Citizen's pious hope that at the next meeting "some speaker equal to the occasion will appear," I heartily join, only adding this hope, that Citizen may never have another such a Sunday of pangs as the last seems to have been to him

TUESDAY MORNING, JANUARY 10 1871

CITY.

A Change —During several months in each of the last two or three years, Mr Bates has had at Oro Fino a dramatic company, of whom it might be said at all times that not less than three or four were stars At no time has the average talent of the company been below the average of other companies playing anywhere on the Pacific coast and often as the personale of the company has been changed by comers and goers it has really been a better company, including all than could be found on the Pacific Coast and we have heard it said, time and again, by those who had just returned from the East that nowhere had they seen plays better performed or better presented than at Oro Fino The performances have, without a single exception, been of that character to which not even the most fastidious could object and against which there could be launched no ill willed criticism So steadfastly did the management stand by their rule to present none but pieces of good tone and morals, that the theater going public had come to rely with the utmost confidence upon seeing, whenever they should visit the place an entertainment to which any lady or gentleman, however particular or fastidious, might look with pleasure, yet this theater has not been well supported, and the management has often lost money in keeping it open The public has never found any fault with the performances, except the occasional lack of novelty—change of faces. This winter, especially there has been a good deal of talk about a "change wanted" At last, the company, having resolved to make a trip up the Columbia, made a change ' and last night an entire new set of faces were presented We cannot say any thing in favor of the 'change We have with pleasure, attempted to assist the old company with kind words and will do so again if the opportunity be presented but we wash our hands of the new faces There is among them but one performer above mediocrity—Senate He certainly does the clog dance in splendid style, and is a general performer does moderately well The young ladies may be very worthy, but they are neither pretty nor graceful nor are they either actors or singers Miss Prudy, the younger of the two who appeared last evening, has a certain amount of smartness, but she must have a long and severe course of training before she can become attractive. A part of the performance, notwithstanding the novelty, was uninteresting tame, coarse and—well, the least we can say of it is that it won't bear repetition We cannot say who the management is, but we can say that a mistake has been made, and the sooner the "Wellings' are withdrawn the better

Membership of the Library Association —At the last annual meeting of the Library Association the constitution was so amended as to divide the members into yearly and quarterly ones. A quarterly member pays $3 per quarter, and is entitled to all the privileges of the library rooms, news papers, etc The yearly members are to pay $25 per annum in advance or before the 15th day of January These members, in addition to the privileges above mentioned, elect the directors and are thereby made the ultimate owners and managers of this property This institution has become one of the necessities of Portland, and must be maintained It has done more to make a favorable impression upon intelligent visitors and sojourners here than any other institution in the city Every citizen of Portland with an income of $5 000 a year can well afford to become a yearly member, and ought to The effects of the association are probably worth $5 000, and the amount is every day increasing Twenty five dollars per annum, if the subscription is renewed every year, as it may or may not be is equivalent to interest on $250, or to taking $250 stock in the association on a perpetual credit upon the payment of interest at ten per cent per annum We hope to hear that at least fifty persons have become yearly members within the next five days

Excursion to Kalama.—We have seen one or two of the people who went down to Kalama on Sunday they were disappointed somewhat in not finding the city they went to see. They couldn't find a [illegible] or a "distilled damnation" chebang in the whole place, and the trip was, therefore, a rather dry affair except as to the rain and such moisture as the excursionists could get on board the steam boat. There was plenty of brush and mud at the landing and back of that, a bluff and forest, but nary a street or sidewalk So far as sight seeing was concerned the excursionists might as well have landed at any one of a hundred places The Railroad Company has a corps of surveyors at work but that don't make the place look like a town they have contracts in progress for timber and lumber for various buildings, wharves, etc., and the workmen are pursuing their occupation in the woods, and so of the clearing gangs and all other forces employed The excursionists were therefore, just as wise when they came back as when they started.

Oregon the Best Spot on the Coast —A correspondent of the Farmer, after exploring California and Washington Territory, comes to Oregon and writes the following "Not liking the country [Puget Sound] I came to this place, Portland Oregon), last September I found a different country from any that I had seen on this coast—far superior to Washington Territory, better than Lower California and equal to any part of the Golden State Here can be found the very best of land, improved farms, everybody doing well plenty of money, good times, and in fact the only prosperous country that I have seen on this coast. Emigrants coming to the Pacific coast would do well to try Oregon Take my word for it, they will find it far superior to any State or Territory on this coast Wages are good, and there is plenty to do, and an abundance of the best kind of land For my part, I prefer it to any place I have seen, and would recommend to one and all, come to Oregon "

Floods in Washington Territory —Capt Bob Hoyt, who came up from Monticello yesterday, informs us that the Cowlitz is very high and still rising, the people have fears of an overflow The news from the road between Monticello and Skookum Chuck was to the effect that the streams are all high, and many of them overflowed Pumphrey's creek is too deep for fording, and the Chehalis is overflowed and can only be crossed by means of boats Several bridges and sections of corduroy have been carried away, travel is practically suspended, and the mails are got through only irregularly and with great difficulty The rains are still falling steadily and the streams are still rising It will probably be several days from all reports, before travel will be practicable.

Annual Meeting and Election of Trustees There will be an annual meeting of the Unitarian Society at their church this evening at 7 o'clock, to hear the reports of their officers for the past year, and to elect three trustees to serve three years The Board of Trustees consists of nine members, three retiring every year All persons, both men and women, who have contributed annually to the funds of the Society and signed the Constitution are voters at this annual meeting.

Error in Name —We find that we made a mistake in the name of the man who hanged himself Sunday morning His name was Charles [illegible] A gentleman who had known him for some months informs us that he had been in exceedingly low spirits at times for a good while, brooding frequently over his want of success in the world. It is probable that his mind had become affected with monomania

Out Again —Mr Carroll, the latest case of small pox in this city, of which we have any knowledge, was out on the street again yesterday He has been fully recovered for some days but was kept in doors on account of the inclement weather He looks as though he had had some thing a trifle more serious than the Salem chicken pox

Gone.—The Bates Dramatic Company leave this morning for the Dalles We are not informed as to the duration of their absence but it is possible they may continue their trip to Walla Walla or they may return from the Dalles This point is we believe, unsettled as yet We hope, sincerely, that they may soon return

The River —The late rains have swelled the river to a good stage and the water is still raising rapidly The prospects are that we will have higher water than has been known for several years at this time of the winter Considerable flood trash has been running for the last two or three days

Parties —The lately elected officers of the Emmet Guard will have a reception party at their armory next Thursday evening

On the same evening there will be a social hop at the House of Multnomah Engine Co No 2

Notary Public —John C Work, Esq of this city has been appointed a Notary Public for Multnomah county

Arrival of the Hattie C Besse —The bark Hattie C Besse, Wiggins, Master, arrived at one o clock yesterday morning, twenty two days from San Francisco, with a cargo of 450 tons merchandise The Besse sailed from San Francisco Dec 17th, arrived off the bar on the 27th, having had only light winds and fine weather, lay off the bar till Jan 3d experiencing heavy weather, was towed in Jan 3d by the tugboat Astoria. She was towed up as far as Eagle Cliff by the Okanagan on the 5th, and on the 8th the Dixie Thompson brought her up to this port. The following is a list of her consignees, Wasserman & Co, George L Story Everding & Farrell, P D & H Co, M & Co, R & Co, Wm Ball, Baum Bros, P Richter & Co, Capt George A Pease, F L Tileston, W Jackson & Co, Hodge, Calef & Co, E Milwain, George Abernethy, Hurgren & Shindler, J McHenry, McCraken, Merrill & Co, S J McCormick, E Martin & Co, E J Northrup & Co, E Elkeles, Quackenbush & Co Leveridge, Wadhams & Co, H W Corbett, Diamond G, Smith & Davis, W N Watkins, Henry Failling, A Meir, Hawley, Dodd & Co Millard & Van Schuyver, Friedman & Co, Corbitt & Macleay J G Megler, C L Parker, Hapgood, Hume & Co, George Hume & Co, Chas Russell Walla Walla, M V Dalles J & N, Corvallis, E T & Bro, Albany, J K Gill, Salem E N T, Jefferson, W B, Lafayette The following is, in part, her specified cargo 250 pkgs stoves and hollow-ware, 8 cases powder, 124 pkgs furniture 150 bbls lime, 9 bales wool, 229 cases oil, 39 crates 40 pkgs crockery, 250 bales 25 mats dairy and table salt, 250 sks Liverpool salt, 80 sks coal, 2 651 bxs soap, 100 bxs raisins, 29 cases matches, 63 pkgs hubs, spokes, fellces, etc

Improving—The boy, Brown, who was accidentally shot last week, is reported by the attending physician to be getting along finely The bullet has not been extracted, on account of the great sensitiveness of the groin, near where it entered, but the wound is doing well and the patient is lively

Festival —The members of the Lutheran church announce a festival at their church building, corner of Taylor and Fifth streets, to-morrow evening, when supper and various entertainments will be dispensed—all for fifty cents An agreeable time may be looked for

The Public Schools.—The public schools of this city began a new term yesterday

Recommendation.

PORTLAND, Ogn, Jan. 9th, 1871

H L Marston—Agent of Perkins & House's Non Explosive Lamp, Portland, Oregon —Sir With much pleasure I certify to the good qualities of the lamp of which you are the agent.

Having used them almost since their introduction to the public, I feel competent to give a somewhat decided opinion upon their merits They are, with the exception of the German student's lamp, an expensive one, the best in the market for safety, economy in oil, and for their illuminating qualities

At Fort Monroe, Virginia, all other lamps were discarded to give place to these, and then all who have the means to purchase them, will use no other I will use no other lamp for general illuminating purposes, as, with them, I feel perfectly safe in using kerosene oil of any specific gravity over 135° They are not liable to get out of order, cannot be broken except by using intentional violence, and, in consequence of the oil feeding from the bottom of the reservoir, and furnishing to the wick cup the heavier particles at first, there is no diminution in the intensity of the light, as in the case of all lamps fed directly to the wick from the reservoir, where the light oil is first burnt, leaving the heavy oil to sink to the bottom

These lamps for their safety, if for no other quality, deserve to take the place of all others in the market By the use of them many of the terrible accidents, caused by the explosion of kerosene lamps, will be avoided, as there is not one single case on record where any accident has occurred to them, whilst the very simple directions for their use was complied with

Temperance Men Admit its Utility.—No attempt has ever been made or ever will be made to disguise the character of Plantation Bitters It contains alcohol and no Bitters that does not contain alcohol is worth a rush Water will neither preserve the virtues of tonic vegetables nor render them active in the system This is a chemical fact which no one competent to deliver an opinion will deny Water tonics sour on the stomach if they are not sour to begin with (which is frequently the case) and produce and promote indigestion instead of curing it. Let it therefore be distinctly understood that Plantation Bitters is an alcohol restorative But mark this it is strictly a medicine not a beverage It is to be taken in limited quantities and at stated times like other remedies and antidotes, and therefore its use is in accordance with temperance law, as well as with that higher law which renders it incumbent upon every being gifted with reason to resort to the best possible means of accomplishing a salutary end

Next month we expect another shipment of those justly celebrated BAIN WAGONS, (Have now only a few left of the last lot) STILL FURTHER IMPROVED over all heretofore received It is not presumption on our part to say that they are head and shoulders above any other Farm wagon in market in point of material, workmanship and finish, having achieved a reputation throughout the West, and wherever introduced on the Pacific second to no other wagon Bain's of the first sold here—three years ago,—have never yet had a tire re-set, and our experience has enabled us to order many changes and improvements over the ordinary make of wagons to meet the wants and requirements of this coast. We shall sell the BAIN WAGON at the lowest possible price for a first-class wagon and WARRANT them such, and in this connection beg to caution purchasers not to confound them with inferior makes that others are or may endeavor to sell on the strength of the established reputation of the Bain manufacture, particularly after having made repeated and persistent efforts (without avail) to purchase wagons of Mr. Bain for this market

TRESSILIAN COURT;

OR,

The Baronet's Son.

By Mrs. Harriet Lewis,

AUTHOR OF "THE DOUBLE LIFE," "THE BAILIFF'S SCHEME," "THE SUNDERED HEARTS," "THE LADY OF KILDARE," "A LIFE AT STAKE," "THE HOUSE OF SECRETS," ETC., ETC., ETC.,

CHAPTER I,

A FATEFUL CATASTROPHE.

A wild storm was raging upon the Mediterranean Sea, near the close of a dreary November day, and sky and waters were black with the gloom of the sudden and furious tempest, before which a small sailing vessel was scudding under bare poles. Her build and rigging proclaimed her Sardinian. She was The Gull, Captain Varino master, on her way from Cagliari to Palermo.

She had on board two seamen, and two passengers.

These passengers were Englishmen, who had procured passage on The Gull to Palermo, whence they intended to embark by steamer to Marseilles, the following day.

While the Captain and his assistants were attending to their duties, and expressing apprehensions as to their safety, the two Englishmen stood apart, leaning against the low bulwarks, and surveying the wild scene around them.

These men were both young, apparently of the same age, about three and twenty, but evidently they were not of the same station of life.

One, the more striking of the two, was aristocratic in his bearing, tall, slender and handsome, with a frank, smiling mouth, a pair of fearless blue eyes, set under a wide and massive forehead, and tawny hair blowing back from his face. Noble, generous and kind hearted, he had an adventurous disposition and a dauntless courage.

He was Guy Tressilian, the only son and heir of Sir Arthur Tressilian, Baronet of Tressilian Court, England.

His companion presented a remarkable resemblance to him, being also tall and slender [illegible] tawny hair and mustache, but [illegible] frank smile, the bright fear[illegible] spirit that characterized Tressilian. Young as he was, he [illegible] much of the dark side of life, and [illegible] experiences had been such as to develop [illegible] some of the worst qualities of his nature.

He was [illegible] Lowder, Guy Tressilian's hired [illegible] companion and bosom friend.

The [illegible] connection of the two [illegible] Young Tressilian had spent four years [illegible] German university, [illegible] he had been graduated with honor. [illegible] the university in obedience to his [illegible] command he had undertaken [illegible] the countries inclosing the Mediterranean [illegible] with one of his late [illegible]. The gentleman being unexpectedly [illegible] professorship, abandoned [illegible], leaving him to find another [illegible] companion.

[illegible] of the very day after this [illegible] Guy Tressilian was sauntering [illegible] streets of Baden, he had been [illegible] of his own countrymen, [illegible] intoxicated. It was apparent [illegible] intended [illegible] upon him. Without [illegible] forced him to de[illegible] was getting the worst of [illegible] stranger came running to [illegible] a few moments the two [illegible] to flight.

[illegible] stranger who came so opportunely to [illegible] assistance was Jasper Lowder. His re[illegible] Tressilian awakened in [illegible] romantic interest. He questioned Lowder [illegible] that he was poor and [illegible] and took him with him to [illegible] that the similarity of [illegible] similarity of tastes and [illegible] engaged Lowder as his traveling [illegible] the past year they had spent [illegible] like brothers than employer [illegible].

[illegible] is a regular Levanter," said [illegible] with both hands to the bulwarks. "Do you think the craft will stand [illegible]?"

[illegible]" answered young Tressilian, [illegible] spray from his face. "The [illegible] the Sicilian coast perfectly. [illegible] we shall be in the bay [illegible] three hours we shall be [illegible] the best rooms [illegible] the hotel [illegible] with the best supper which Mes[illegible] can furnish, and to-morrow, at [illegible] shall embark for [illegible] Messageries steamer."

"[illegible] Marseilles you will proceed to [illegible] Tressilian Court," said Lowder with some bitterness. "And I—what is [illegible] I have had a year of unalloyed happiness, and now comes back the [illegible] hopeless toil, the anxieties of [illegible] life. You picked me up at [illegible] adventurer seeking to gain a [illegible] English, and the same des[illegible] me now."

[illegible] turned his handsome face upon [illegible] companion in surprise and affectionate reproach.

"Jasper!" he exclaimed, "you talk strangely. [illegible] you suppose I have called you friend and brother so long, and loved you so well, to lose you now? I meant to have written to my father concerning you and your future, Jasper, but his sudden recall, received yesterday, causes me to return home without writing. I shall telegraph from Marseilles that you will come home with me. And you will, will you not? You will not abandon me, my friend? I will charge myself with your future. I will see that you obtain the position to which your talents entitle you. You have no ties to keep you on the Continent?"

A strange expression passed over Jasper Lowder's face.

"No, I have no ties," he said huskily.

"And you will go home with me?"

"What will your father say to my coming?" demanded Lowder. "He will think your generosity Quixotic. He will dismiss from his house the hired companion who dared to resemble his son—"

A sudden lurch of the little vessel, a wave sweeping over the deck, interrupted the sentence.

"You wrong my father," said Tressilian, his blue eyes kindling, when the vessel had righted. "He is the noblest man in the world. He will welcome my friends as his own. You will love him, Jasper, as I do, when you know him."

"He doesn't seem very affectionate," remarked Lowder. "You have been away from your home for five years, and he has but just recalled you!"

Young Tressilian's cheek flushed, as Lowder saw in the lurid glow that momentarily lighted up the tempestuous scene.

"You know, or can guess, the reason, Jasper," he said, with something of an effort. "My father has a ward, the daughter of an old friend. Ah! hear that wind shriek! The gale is increasing!"

"Yes," assented Lowder. "And the ward is Miss Irby—the golden-haired Blanche of whom you have talked so much, and with whom you have exchanged letters?"

"Yes. My father formed a project to have me marry Blanche. He did not wish us to grow up together, lest we should learn to regard each other as brother and sister. When Blanche came to live at the Court my father sent me to Germany. The night before I left home he called me into his library and told me all his hopes and plans for my future, and entreated me to continue worthy of his innocent ward, and to keep my heart pure for her. I have done so, Jasper. I have never yet loved any woman. And yesterday I received my father's summons to come home. He has recalled me after five years of absence. I know the wish that lies nearest his heart. He wants me to return and marry Blanche. I shrink from the proposed marriage. I dread going home. And I dread offending my dear father, whom I love better than any woman. It is hard, Jasper, to revolt against the hopes and plans of a kind and generous father, whose very love for me causes him to urge on this marriage!"

"Is it?" said Lowder dryly, and with a strange smile full of sneering bitterness. "My experience has been widely different from yours, Tressilian. Did I ever tell you of my father?"

"No. I took it for granted that he is dead."

"Perhaps he is. I don't know," said Lowder, with a reckless laugh. "But if he is living, he is a scoundrel. Don't start, Tressilian, at my unfilial speech. Wait till you hear my story. I am in a desperate mood to-night. This storm stirs up all the bad within me. As nearly as I can discover, my father was the younger son of a proud old country family—"

"You do not know, then?" asked Tressilian, pressing his companion's hand.

"I have no proofs of it. All I positively know is this. My mother was of humble station, pretty, with blue eyes and apple-blossom face, and tender, appealing ways. She was the daughter of a widow, residing at Brighton. The widow, my grand-mother, kept a lodging-house, and my father, a gay, dashing young fellow, came to lodge with her. As might have been expected, he fell in love with his landlady's daughter. He offered the young girl marriage, on condition that the union should be kept secret until his affairs brightened and he chose to divulge it. The young girl loved him. Her mother was ambitious and penurious. The result was the lover had his way, and married the daughter of his landlady quietly, almost secretly. Then he took his bride to London, to cheap and obscure lodgings, where a year later, I was born."

The wind for a moment drowned his voice. As it presently lulled, he resumed recklessly, and with passionate bitterness:

"For years my mother and I lived in those stuffy, obscure lodgings until her bloom had faded, and she had grown thin and wan and nervous. My father visited us at stated seasons, once or twice a week, but he never brought any of his family to call upon us. I doubt if his aristocratic relatives even suspected the existence of the faded wife and son of whom he was secretly ashamed. I have good reason to believe that he had fine lodgings at the West end, where he was supposed to be a bachelor, and that he went into fashionable society, while my poor mother and I lived obscurely. He was a profligate and a roue, but he had an air of fashion that awakened my boyish ambition, and aroused my mother's affectionate pride in him. She was always pleading to be introduced to his relatives, and to have her son publicly acknowledged. But my father always put her off, saying that he was not yet ready. Worn out and despairing, my mother died when I was ten years old."

Again the wind shrieked past, again the little vessel lurched, the sea sweeping her decks.

She captain screamed his orders to his men, and for a few minutes disorder reigned.

"A nasty bit of weather!" said Lowder. "And a bad sky!"

"Yes, but I've seen as bad," returned Tressilian. "We shall make port all right, never fear. We must be well on toward the Cape di Gallo. And it's only seven miles from the Cape to Palermo."

"But the seven miles in this storm are worse than seventy in good weather. These coasts are dangerous, Tressilian."

Lowder shuddered as he surveyed sea and sky.

"But about your father, Jasper?" said Tressilian, who had become deeply interested in his companion's story. "What did he do after your mother's death?"

"I remained at the lodgings with our single old servant a month or more, my father visiting me several times, and expressing anxiety as to what he should do with me. A week after my mother's death, he told me that his brother was dead. A month later, his father was killed by being thrown from his horse. My father came into riches and honors by these deaths. At last, deciding to rid himself of me, he took me down to Brighton, to my old grandmother. Her sons were dead; she had given up keeping lodgers, and was grown miserly. He promised her five hundred pounds a year to keep me, and to keep also the secret of my paternity, solemnly promising to acknowledge me some day as his son and heir. The old woman agreed to carry out his wishes. She would have done anything for money. I never saw my father again. I went to school, grew up, and at the age of twenty-one came into my grandmother's money, the fruits of years of saving, she dying at that time. My father had deliberately abandoned me. I did not know where to seek him, if I had wished to. I took my money and came abroad. I had been two years on the Continent, and had spent my little fortune when I met you. The rest you know."

"An odd, romantic story! But why did your father abandon you?"

"That he might be freed of encumbrance to make a grand marriage. From what my grandmother said at different times, I conclude that my father was in love with a titled lady before my mother's death. No doubt he married this lady. If he lives, this lady's son may be his acknowledged heir. My father has utterly disowned the son of his hasty, ill-starred marriage. I have a fancy that I shall meet him some day," and Jasper's brow darkened to deeper blackness. "However, I stand no chance of ever receiving justice at his hands."

"What is your father's name, Jasper?" asked Tressilian.

Lowder's face darkened. He bit his lip savagely.

"What I have told you about myself I learned from my own observation, or from chance words of my parents and grandmother. My mother's maiden name was Jeanette Lowder. At our London lodgings, my father bore the name of Lowder. I don't know his real name, but I should know his face anywhere, although I have not seen him in thirteen years. My mother was actually married, Tressilian, but I never heard my father's name. The clergyman who married mother was dead; the witnesses also. When my grandmother was dying she tried to tell me the story. She had put it off too long. All that I could understand of her mumblings was the name of Devereux. I shall never forget that name—'DEVEREUX!' Probably that was my father's name—my own rightful name. But as I should never find him if I sought him, and as he would repulse me if I did find him, I stand no chance of inheriting his property. He may be dead. He may have other sons who have succeeded him. It is all a mystery, but the prominent truth is that I am an outcast, poor, disowned and friendless."

He leaned over the bulwark, the spray dashing over his face violently.

Tressilian's heart warmed to him.

"My poor friend!" he said. "Must I say again you are not friendless while I live? My father has influence enough to obtain for you a government appointment. This tangle may straighten itself out some day. But if it don't you are resolute enough to make your own happiness."

He grasped Lowder's hand, and looked with warm, bright eyes, full of sympathy, into Lowder's lowering face.

There had been a temporary lull in the storm. But as the two stood there, the tempest revived and swept over the wild sea in maddened rage.

There was no time for talking now. The wind rose so high that words would scarcely have been distinguished. The storm that had gone before had been but play to this awful outburst. The vessel drove on, creaking and groaning, a mere cockle shell on the billows.

"Mother of Mercies!" wailed the captain. "It's all up with us, signores. I can't make out the Cape in this darkness. We shall go on the rocks. St. Anthony save us!"

The seamen echoed his cries.

The two young Englishmen, comprehending their peril, clasped hands in silence.

For the next few minutes it seemed that a Pandemonium reigned.

Then a noise like the report of a cannon suddenly boomed through the storm and the darkness. The little vessel shivered, staggered and careened upon her side.

She had struck upon a rock.

A moment later crew and passengers were struggling in the waters.

A few moments of buffetings and tossings, of vain struggles and agonized, involuntary prayer, and then Jasper Lowder felt his senses slip away from him, and he became unconscious. When he came to himself he was lying upon a rocky beach of the Sicilian shore, sore, bruised and weak as a child.

He opened his eyes. The wind had spent its fury, and now moaned along the coast with a desolate, despairing wail. The waves beat against the rocks.

Lowder struggled to his elbow.

"Wrecked!" he muttered. "I'm cast ashore while the others are drowned! Oh, this is terrible! I have lost my best friend to-night!"

He moaned and wrung his hands.

"He is dead, who would have done so much for me, and I so worthless am saved! All my hopes of an easy and luxurious life must be resigned now!"

At that moment he beheld a dark object at a little distance in the water. The waves hurled this object against the projecting head of a sunken rock. At the same instant Lowder recognized it as the body of a man.

He crept toward it, and the waters dashed the body on the shore at his feet. He put his hands on the face. How cold and wet it was! It felt like the face of a dead man! Lowder's fingers came in contact with the soft, silken mustache, and he knew that the body was that of Guy Tressilian!

Of the five who had stood on the sloop's deck a half-hour earlier, these two alone were left. The captain and his crew had found their deaths among the cruel, yawning waters.

Lowder thrust his hand under the waistcoat of his friend, but he could not perceive the beating of his heart. Despair took possession of him.

"Dead!" he said shrilly. "Dead! And he would have done so much for me if he had lived! And his father and the young girl he was to have married will wait in vain for his coming! His place at Tressilian Court is empty. Who can fill it?"

It seemed to him that some demon at his side echoed the question: Who could fill the place left vacant by noble Guy Tressilian?

A thought came to him—a thought so strange and sinister that he shivered involuntarily. Again he felt of Tressilian's heart. It gave no throb against his hand. He passed his hand over Tressilian's head and discovered a gaping wound in the skull. The hair was clotted with blood.

Putting his hand into his breast pocket, Lowder drew out his little water-proof match-safe. He opened it with trembling fingers and struck a light. The red flicker danced on young Tressilian's face.

How ghastly and terrible it looked! The eyes were closed, the smile was gone. The seal of death seemed set on the noble features.

Lowder examined the wound. It had been made by contact with the sharp rock, and even Lowder perceived its terrible character.

"If he is not dead, he soon will be," he muttered. "His brain has received an awful injury. He will never know who he is again. He won't live till morning, and he is perhaps dead already. He must be dead!"

Again it seemed to him as though some demon echoed his words.

The match dropped from his fingers into the water. For a little while he crouched on the wet stones in silence, battling it may be with the better and nobler instincts of his nature.

At last, with a sudden and abrupt stealthiness, his hand stole into the breast pocket of Tressilian and drew out his private note book, a packet of letters, a few trinkets. He secured these among his own wet garments. Their possession seemed to give him courage, and his face hardened, and he knelt beside the body of his friend and rifled his garments of all that they contained, bestowing his plunder on his own person.

Then he took his own purse, his note-book, a few receipts and other trifles from his own pockets, and put them in the pockets of Tressilian.

"It is done!" he whispered to himself, looking with wild defiant eyes through the darkness. "No one is harmed. He is dead. If he had lived he would have provided for me. As he is dying, or dead, I must provide for myself. This likeness between us will make my fortune. His friends will be spared a terrible grief, and I—I shall live at last! Fortune gives me a chance to gain name and wealth at one lucky stroke!"

As if to give himself no chance for repentance, he arose to his feet and turned his searching glances in an inland direction. A light, as from a cottage window, glimmering faintly through the thick haze, caught his gaze.

Raising his voice he called loudly:

"Help! Ho, there! Help!"

The wind had ceased, and his cries rang out through the night with startling distinctness. The light he had seen moved and disappeared. A minute later, answering cries reached Lowder's ears, and he heard hasty steps, and saw the approaching light of a lantern, borne aloft by a man's upraised arm.

"This way!" shouted Lowder. "We are wrecked on the rocks! For the love of Heaven, hasten!"

The bearer of the lantern, attended by a male companion, came running to him, and was soon at his side. The lantern bearer was a rough Sicilian fisherman, a grade above his class. His companion was also Sicilian, but evidently of somewhat higher degree. Both were all excitement, astonishment and sympathy.

In as few words as possible Lowder told the story of the shipwreck, and called attention to the condition of his noble young employer.

"I think he is dead!" he said, in a choking voice. "Carry him up to your cabin. Let everything be done to save him. I will pay you well for any kindness to him. Poor fellow! He was my traveling companion. I loved him as if he had been my brother, instead of only my hired attendant! Poor Jasper!"

The two Sicilians lifted the helpless form of poor young Tressilian, and carried it between them towards their cottage. Jasper Lowder following them, bewailing his loss. The above we publish as a specimen chapter; but the continuation of this story will be found only in the N. Y. Ledger. TO THE UNFORTUNATE.

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,

623 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

DR. GIBBON has the pleasure of announcing that he has returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe, and has resumed practice at his Dispensary, 623 Kearny street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco, where his old patients and those requiring his services may find him.

The Doctor has spared neither time nor money in seeking out new remedies, and has returned with increased facilities for the alleviation of human suffering.

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgence, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies—see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private diseases his specialist study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practised by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, fetid breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G. will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

MARRIED MEN.

Or those who contemplate marriage, who are suffering under any of these fearful maladies, should not forget the sacred responsibility resting upon them nor delay to obtain immediate relief.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

CURED AT HOME.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Dr. Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions. By inclosing Ten Dollars coin, in registered letter through the Postoffice or through Wells, Fargo & Co., a package of medicine will be forwarded to any part of the Union.

All communications strictly confidential.

Address DR. J. F. GIBBON, 623 Kearney street, corner Commercial, San Francisco. Post Office Box 1,957. REMEMBER TO PUT BOX 1,957 ON THE LETTER. Consultations FREE.

Correspondents will please inform DR. GIBBON that they read his advertisement in the Daily Oreg. jy6d4ptf

LAND DEPARTMENT OREGON & CALIFORNIA RAILROAD COMPANY.

SALEM, OREGON, October 22, 1870.

THE FOLLOWING STATEMENT IS MADE FOR information of all concerned:

First—Congress has granted to the Company all alternate sections of the public lands designated by odd numbers within a distance of thirty miles on each side of the railroad, excepting lands to which a pre-emption or homestead claim had attached prior to the withdrawal by Government of the lands co-terminous with the first division of located line from East Portland to Jefferson, at 12 M. February 16, 1870. The second division of located line from Jefferson to a point six miles south of Roseburg, May, 1870, and from the last named point to the California line, 1870.

Second—Persons who have valid pre-emption or homestead claims to any tract on an odd numbered section can purchase the same, from the Railroad Company at the Government price of $1 25 per acre in greenbacks, and upon very favorable terms, if they so desire, by filing an abandonment of their claim in the U. S. Land Office, blanks for which will be furnished by the Land Agent of the Company. Such purchase from the Company has three advantages over a purchase from the Government. The party can leave the land if necessary; he can sell the land or mortgage it, he is saved the payment of lawyers' or agents' fees, and expenses of witnesses to go to the Land Office to "prove up" his claim, he can get his title perfect in less time, and he can buy on credit at a low rate of interest.

Third—No sales will be made by the Company until the land is listed over to it by the United States Land Commissioner and Secretary of the Interior.

Purchasers are thus assured that the title they obtain is perfect.
